Now in its fourth edition, this popular book provides clear, step-by-step guidance for new and experienced interviewers to develop, shape, and reflect on interviewing as a qualitative research process. Customer Reviews

Irving Seidman is professor emeritus at the School of Education, University of Massachusetts, Amherst. He offers workshops and short courses and communicates with individual researchers who have questions about the method described in this book.

This is a good reference for novice qualitative researchers, especially if you are using phenomenological research methods. The section on phenomenological research interviews was especially important for my dissertation. It gives instructions on how interviews should be schedule in conjunction with maintaining the structure of the 3-cycle interview process. As a co-read, I recommend Doing Qualitative Research Differently (Holloway & Jefferson).

thank you
