I bought this book on the recommendation of a fellow teacher. I will be teaching a Medieval Times unit next school year, and she told me that this was the best resource she had found for the unit. I am so glad I took her advice! This book covers most of the topics I want to teach my students, including: Religion, trade, geography, feudal system, architecture, heraldry, clothing, food, music, knighthood, etc. The book is written for teachers with background/history information on each topic. It gives ideas for lessons, reproducible worksheets, drawings, and maps (teacher version and student version for them to fill in). The author has created a make believe Medieval village called "Higginswold". Lessons are based on teaching students about village life during the Middle Ages, using Higginswold as the setting. There is a poster of this town included in the book. I am coloring mine and using it as one of my bulletin boards in the classroom. This book has the most comprehensive information that I have come across when creating my curriculum for this unit. I recommend it to anyone teaching about the Middle Ages and have used it numerous times in my planning already!!

My favorite Middle Ages resource, this 106 page unit study can be used in classrooms or homeschools and includes a study of the history of the middle ages; craftsmen and guilds, lords and ladies, monks and monasteries; food and feasting; music and dance; artists and art; literature; and has timeline and vocabulary activities. It is appropriate for students in upper elementary to middle school years. There are suggested activities for each chapter and discussion questions, maps, coloring pages (Bayeaux Tapestry, Celtic alphabet, heraldry designs), and an accompanying reading list for each chapter. It concludes with directions for a medieval feast.
